Co-funded by the European Union

Archipelagos aims to unearth the diversity of European literary voices by supporting the role of translators as explorers of literature written in lesser used languages, and reinforcing the expertise of book chain professionals.

Archipelagos

Archipelagos is a three-year project launched in January 2024. It stems from the need to safeguard, develop and promote linguistic and cultural diversity within the translated literature market across Europe. Works translated in European languages other than English are in the minority, and the part played by literary translators in their discovery often remains invisible.

Literary translators can benefit from a wide range of opportunities over three years: over 100 residencies and 10 workshops will bring together more than 150 translators.

Through a variety of meetings and professional seminars, booksellers, librarians and publishers will also be able to gain a better understanding of lesser-known literature. Finally, Archipelagos will be present at several literary events in Europe, giving the scouting translators the opportunity to share the published treasures they have found with a wide audience.
